John T. Osgood is a civil litigator with vast experience handling complex commercial disputes, personal injury and premises liability claims, insurance coverage disputes, bad faith claims asserted against insurance carriers, and construction defect claims in Colorado and other jurisdictions. In his thirteen years as an attorney in Denver, John has managed numerous cases through trial and appeal in state and federal trial courts across the country, and has also represented clients in state and federal trial courts across the country, and has also represented clients in business disputes before various arbitration tribunals.

John received his Juris Doctorate from the Syracuse University School of Law, where he served as an Executive Editor of the Syracuse Law Review. Prior to attending law school, John was a four-year letterman on the varsity baseball team at Cornell University, earning All-Ivy League honors as a utility player in 1998. It is this experience as a college athlete that John views as his most reliable resource in the practice of law. The in-game strategy in baseball often mirrors that in a complex legal matter, requiring quick thinking and execution to ultimately produce the best, and most cost-efficient result for his most important teammates - his clients.

John is an active member of the Denver community. He is a member of the Colorado State Bar, the Arapahoe County Bar Association, and the Colorado Defense Lawyers Association. John is also a proud supporter of the Epilepsy Foundation of Colorado.

John is married and has two children. He enjoys running and supporting his children in their developing athletic careers in his free time.
