Middletown, DE – Branding is absolutely vital to the establishment, growth and success of any business. Often large companies use a combination of content syndication and press release distribution to market their products and increase the visibility of their brands. Now, Starters Capital Marketing offers the same type of content syndication and press release distribution used by large Fortune 500 companies, but at a fraction of the cost, which allows small and medium sized companies to market their products and services like large corporations.

The Premium Press Release Service has been developed by Starters Capital Marketing with the goal of bringing the same sort of powerful marketing tools to businesses that perhaps thought it was too expensive or time consuming. The Premium Press Release Service produces high-quality press releases based on a specific event or business news related to your company, then distributes it widely to major media outlets at a low cost.

Corporations usually use a press release and syndicated content to accomplish a number of business goals. Obviously, the first thing a press release does is release news to the press. Similarly, content syndication is the release of content containing information related to a product or service the company provides. But both press releases and syndicated content perform another crucial function: they also create quality backlinks.

The idea is that when news organizations or other websites pick up on the press release or syndicated content, it will include links to the company's website, and this back link, as it's called, will help the website rank higher in Google's search results.

Starters Capital Marketing Content Syndication and Press Release writing and distribution puts business-related content in front of thousands of potential new viewers. After your company's content is submitted to the Starters Capital Marketing syndication team, it is published to hundreds of websites, all of which have high domain authority.
