This will immediately launch a pop-up box headed 'File Download – Security Warning'. Beneath this, it asks: 'Do you want to run or save this file?' Click Run.

Step 4: Next, depending on the level of security settings on your computer, you may see another pop-up box asking if you want to 'allow the following program to make changes to this computer'. This is just your computer being overly cautious. Check that the 'Verified publisher' in this window says 'Microsoft' and, if it does, click Yes.

Step 5: Windows Essentials 2012 (which is a package of free software programs from Microsoft) will begin its installation process. A new pop-up will ask you to choose between installing all of these programs or only those that you want. You may wish to download all of them, but for now click Choose the programs you want to install.

Step 6: In the next window, tick 'Photo Gallery and Movie Maker' and click Install.

Step 7: When the software has finished installing, you'll get a final pop-up window announcing that your Windows Live Photo Gallery download is 'Done!'

However, for Windows Live Photo Gallery installation to be complete, you'll need to restart your computer. A pop-up window will offer you the choice of clicking a button to restart it now or one to restart it later if you want to continue surfing the internet. For now, choose Restart Now.

Step 8: Your computer will shut down any other open windows and restart itself. Once it starts up again, you should be able to see the Windows Live Photo Gallery software listed among your 'Programs' when you click the Microsoft Windows icon or 'Start' icon in the lower left-hand corner of your screen.
