

Options for finding jobs online

 Print this guide

If you're job hunting, long gone are the days when you rushed out to buy the right newspaper on the right day, followed by hours spent poring over the ads and circling the ones you liked. Now the papers and several other sites – including the government's Gov.uk – list thousands of job vacancies online.

Many allow you to filter searches so it's easier to find jobs that fit your skills or are in your area. On other sites, you can upload a copy of your CV, which will then be matched to employers looking for your skills and experience.

Follow these step-by-step instructions to find a job online

Step 1: Choose a website to search. Here are some sites you might like to try:

- Gov.uk: Job search – the government jobs portal
- GuardianJobs – particularly good for jobs in the arts and media
- jobsite – one of the UK's largest job search platforms

Some sites like Monster also offer job hunting tips and advice on applying for jobs and making a good impression in interviews.

Step 2: If you have a specific company in mind that you'd like to work for, it's worth looking at its website first as many companies have their own vacancies sections that you can search. Examples include:

- British Airways
- Barclays Bank
- Vodafone
- Tesco

Step 3: Bear in mind that the staff of recruitment agencies are skilled at fitting the right person to the right job. You might want to look at agency websites, too.

Here are a couple of the largest:

Reed

Step 4: All job sites allow you to search their vacancies for specific jobs or keywords – that is, words that would be used to describe the sort of job you're interested in. They also often let you narrow the search by region or city so that you can find vacancies near your home.

Step 5: You'll also frequently encounter an 'advanced search' feature. This allows you to narrow the search to vacancies that more accurately fit your profile or weed out jobs that don't meet your salary requirements. You can also specify location and sometimes the type of contract or hours you'd prefer.

Step 6: Alternatively you can see if your skills match a vacancy by uploading your CV. At Jobsite, you have to register to do this. One of the bonuses of registering with the site is that they'll send you an email when a job fitting your specifications becomes available.
